Three Card Monte Men Try Their Game on New Oxford Citizen.

An attempt was made last week by two slick-tongued strangers to fleece our worthy townsman, Mr. Joseph Holtz, of Pitt street, by the three-card monte game, but as Mr. Holtz is a reader of newspapers and the game was old to him he failed to "bite." The story as told us by Mr. Holtz as near as we can give it, was about as follows:

About six weeks ago stranger No. 1, met Mr. Holtz at the depot and after glancing about the surroundings expressed himself as much pleased with the surrounding country, and inquired of Mr. Holtz about the average price of farm land, stating that he desired to purchase a farm for the widow of his deceased brother. Mr. Holtz informed him that he knew of some good farms that could be purchased at $40 per acre. The stranger then inquired of Mr. Holtz if he would accompany him to some of the farms if he would call on him later which he consented to do and the stranger left.

Early Thursday morning the stranger, who gave his name as Robinson, of Littlestown, brother of Mr. Robinson, Treasurer of the Littlestown Bank, called at the home of Mr. Holtz and desired to be shown the farms above spoken of, but as Mr. Holtz expected a load of hay from one of his farms, could not leave home until the hay was placed in the barn. After the hay was unloaded the stranger insisted Mr. Holtz get into his buggy and he would drive him over the country, but as Mr. Holtz desired to go to his farm near New Chester to do some work, and as the farm he had reference to that could be purchased at the price above mentioned, was the old Hultick farm along the New Chester road, he declined the stranger's offer and took his own team. After he had hitched up his team the stranger wanted him to get into his buggy and lead Mr. Holtz's horse but he claimed that his horse would not lead, and they started out the road in their respective buggies. After getting out of town a short distance the stranger called to Mr. Holtz that his horse would lead and asked to get into his buggy, to which Mr. Holtz consented. In this way they continued to journey until the hill just beyond the Swift Run bridge was reached.

At this point the stranger, pointing into the woods close to the road, said there was somebody wanting him. Mr. Holtz glanced around and saw stranger No. 2, beckoning him to stop. Stranger No. 2 then came up to the buggy and inquired of the occupants if they could direct him to Guldens Station, stating that he had just come from North Carolina and had left his buggy at the station, and in searching for a sister whom he thought was located somewhere in that vicinity, became lost; all the while acting in a reckless or half-drunken manner, while his dress was of a peculiar style.

Here stranger No. 2 related a story of how his sister "Sal" had nursed a Yankee soldier to recovery during the civil war, and afterward married him. He said he didn't like a yankee, neither did "dad" and for that reason sister "Sal" was disinherited; but he said the old man died about a year ago and that they had sold one of the plantations in North Carolina for $140,000, and that he and brother Ben had decided to "fix up" sister "Sal" and he was here hunting her up for that purpose, but found that she had died and her husband had gone to Oklahoma.

At this stage of the game he inquired of the occupants of the buggy: "How are you Yankees off for toad skins?" Stranger No. 1 could not imagine what he meant, and No. 2 was surprised at the ignorance of the Yankees in not knowing what toad skins were, reached into the pocket of his linen duster and flung into the buggy in front of the occupants several books of banknotes of large denomination, showing the amount to be $10,000, with the remark, "that is what I mean." No. 1 was startled at the loose manner in which he was handling so large amount of money, and at the same time whispering to Mr. Holtz that he was intoxicated, etc. No. 2 said he didn't like this country and was going back to North Carolina, and as Sal was dead he would take the "toad skins" back with him. He said the only place in this part of the country that he cared to stay was Philadelphia and that place was too expensive. No. 1 inquired if he had been to Philadelphia, and how long, to which he replied that he was there for 10 days.

No. 1 asked how much it cost him during his stay there, to which he said he was ashamed to say, but by a little urging he finally said $5,000. This astounded No. 1 and he wanted to know how it was that it cost $5,000 to stay in Philadelphia 10 days. Here he produced a number of cards and remarked, these are what did it, the Philadelphians "done" me. He then got to showing how the trick was done and how easy it was to turn up the winning card, any amount from $5 to $5,000 could be bet. Eventually No. 1 tried his luck and twice turned up the winning card and the money was shoved to him, all that was required was for him to show that he had an equal amount in his pocket. Then there was an effort made to have Mr. Holtz try his luck, the man in the buggy urging him by whispering that the man handling the money was drunk and reckless and some one would get away with his money, and they might as well have it as anybody else, that all he had to do was to "show up" that he had an equal amount. Mr. Holtz was posted on the game, however, but finally was induced to turn up a card "only for fun;" it was lucky and the money was shoved at him, but he refused to accept, stating that he was not a gambler, and then told the stranger that the game was too old for him to "bite" on.

Mr. Holtz at this instance began to think that he was in very bad company at a lonely place, and started his horse on his way, remarking to the stranger in the buggy that he could stay in or get out, just as he wished. The man remained in the buggy for some distance when he said he seen all of the country he desired, and taking his team returned to his partner.

Some time afterward the two strangers accompanied by a third party, were seen by Mr. Holtz passing by the Holtz farm near New Chester, in two separate buggies. They were then headed for New Oxford, he said, but they failed to make their appearance here and nothing has been heard of them since.

Last Saturday evening as Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Riffe and son Raymond, of Kingsdale, were driving to Littlestown, and when but a short distance from their home, the king-bolt broke and the buggy dropped to the ground spilling out all three of the occupants. The horse with the shafts and front wheels ran at breakneck speed for over a mile up the Taneytown road when he was caught. The animal was severely injured. No one of the occupants of the buggy was injured except the little boy, who was considerably bruised by his fall.

The Farm formerly known as the "Heltzel Farm," situated at Brush Run Station, in Mount Pleasant township, Adams county, Pa., on the York and Gettysburg turnpike, 2 miles from New Oxford and 7 miles from Gettysburg; adjoining lands of Curtis E. Miller, Wm. A. Himes, W. W. Hafer, Mrs. Agnes Shultz and others, containing 207½ acres; improved with a large two-story brick dwelling house, large bank barn, large two-story frame dwelling house, with log stable, wagon shed, carriage house, smoke house, and other necessary out-buildings. About 25 acres of the above farm is woodland, well set with white oak and hickory. There are never-failing wells of water at both houses and barns, and an abundance of fruit on the premises. The farm is one of the most desirable in the county, being convenient to railroad, church, school and market, and is in a high state of cultivation and under good fencing.

The above property will be sold in two parts—one containing 142½ acres, and the other 62 acres, of as a whole, to the best interest of the vendor. Sale to commence at 2 o'clock p. m. Terms by cash. CARL ELDMAN.

St. M. Crawford, Auctioneer.

Backed up by over a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Protrusion, or Falling of the Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Very often a married woman or young girl does not know who to turn to for advice in circumstances where she dislikes to talk with the family physician about delicate matters. At such times write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for free consultation and advice, and the same will be held as sacredly confidential. It is foolish to consult women friends or persons without medical training.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contains no alcohol, is entirely vegetable and was the first exclusively woman's tonic on the market—it has sold more largely in the past third of a century than any other medicine for women.

All other compounds intended for women only are made with alcohol, or alcohol is a large component—this alcohol injures the nerves. The little red corpuscles of the blood are shrunken by alcohol. All such compounds, therefore, do harm.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. Use them with the "Favorite Prescription" when a pill is required. One is a laxative, two, a mild cathartic.

My Fellow Democrats:—

Since very many of my friends have kindly asked me to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President Judge of this District, it is due to you and to them that I make known my position in the matter.

Woman Killed In Runaway Accident.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 25.—"Here comes an automobile and we will all be killed" said Mrs. John Osborne of Carlisle, yesterday afternoon when the horse attached to the surrey in which she was sitting began to show signs of fright at an approaching touring car. Less than one half hour later Mrs. Osborne, as the result of the most disastrous run off which has occurred in Gettysburg, lay dead at the home of Mrs. Charles Stallsmith, on Stratton street.

The accident which Mrs. Osborne her life, occurred yesterday afternoon on Washington street just as that thoroughfare was crowded with excursionists returning from camp.

The horse which was driven by Harry Oyler, took fright near Mundorff's blacksmith shop and started down the street on a dead run. Mrs. Osborne who was sitting on the back seat of the surrey fainted from fright and fell forward across the step and the mud guard.

Somewhere between West Middle and Chambersburg streets the team ran into another conveyance and completely demolished the front wheel of the surrey. At the same time, Mrs. Osborne was thrown from the mud guard to the ground, but her leg and clothing caught on the step and she was dragged, head downwards, as far as the power house, where private Ray M. Rickard, of Company I, Tenth Regiment, succeeded in stopping the horse, which was still trembling from fright.

An ambulance was summoned and the unconscious woman was taken at once to the Stallsmith home, where Dr. O'Neal and two surgeons of the Guard found that her skull had been crushed in, her left hip broken and her whole body badly bruised and lacerated.

The physicians did everything in their power to save her life, but she died within half an hour after the accident.

The automobile, at which the horse frightened, is said to be the property of one of the highest officers in the Guard.

Mrs. Osborne, who was 60 years of age, was well known and had many friends in this place. Her husband, when notified of the accident, was completely prostrated.

Fire at Midway.

Hanover, July 25.—The reputation of Hanover for Saturday night fire alarms was upheld Saturday night, when, at 11:15 a call from the telephone exchange summoned the firemen to a blaze at Midway, fully a mile from the engine house, in which three buildings were destroyed and damage to the amount of over $3000 was inflicted.

The buildings destroyed were a frame barn on the premises of Mrs. James Myers; a small stable and hog pen in the rear of the double frame dwelling house owned by Ezra Myers and across the alley from the James Myers barn, and the clubhouse of the Midway Social club, on the corner opposite the last mentioned building.

The fire, which is generally assumed to have been of incendiary origin, originated in the wagon shed in the west corner of the barn of Mrs. James Myers, which was filled with valuable sawed lumber for the manufacture of cigar boxes, owned by F. J. Sneeringer, proprietor of the Penn Cigar Box factory.

The loss to F. J. Sneeringer by the destruction of the cigar box material is fully $2100, and is almost covered by insurance. The loss sustained by Mrs. James Myers, who owned the building, will reach $500, with an insurance of $150. Mrs. Myers had been carrying $250 insurance on the property until a few weeks ago when it was reduced to $150. The loss to Ezra Myers will foot up $100. No insurance. The Midway clubhouse, owned by Mrs. Anna Sneeringer, of Harrisburg, was totally destroyed. The club members were successful, however, in saving the furniture and contents. Mrs. Sneeringer's loss on the building will amount to $500.

Another Mishap

In the Roland Family.

One day last week while Mr. Edward Roland son of Mr. Josephus Roland, residing along the York pike about Midway between this place and Abbotstown, was engaged at threshing rakings, had the back of his right hand badly lacerated by being caught in the rapidly revolving cylinder, and severing several of the leaders. Had his reach been the least bit farther his entire hand and perhaps arm would have been drawn into the machine. It will be remembered that his father was thrown from a load of hay some weeks ago and had his hip bone fractured besides other injuries, but notwithstanding his advanced age, is improving nicely. The mother who has been ill for some time remains in a critical condition.

In an article which appeared in this paper two weeks ago, the writer stated that the Union Hotel, McSherrytown, was without the conveniences of a bath room. Mr. Johns has since informed us that there is a first-class bath room in the hotel, and all other modern conveniences.

Death's Doings.

Milton Hammie Eyster, who formerly lived at Eisenhart's mill, near East Berlin, died suddenly of colic at Julius' mill, York county, on last Thursday, aged 65 years, 11 months and 6 days. He is survived by his wife and several children. About 45 years ago when diphtheria first made its appearance in York county, out of a family of 7 or 8 children Milton was the only child left in the family the others all having died in the space of a few weeks from the dread disease and interred at Wolf's church. When Milton grew up and married and lived on the farm he now owned and lived, diphtheria entered his family and within a few days carried off in a peculiar coincidence three of his children who were placed in one casket, a public funeral held at Wolf's church and the three bodies consigned to one grave.

Wednesday, July 20th died at Philadelphia, Mrs. Eliza J., widow of Sebastian Hafer, late of St. Omer, Indiana, at an advanced age. Mrs. Hafer was an aunt of Mrs. F. M. Miller and George A. Miller of this place.

Joseph Lawrence died at his home near Pleasant Hill, Darke county, Ohio, on Sunday evening, July 17, after a brief illness, in the 84th year of his age. He is survived by his widow, five children, fourteen grand-children and one great-grandchild. His remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery at Pleasant Hill on Tuesday, the funeral being largely attended by relatives and friends.

Joseph Lawrence was born and reared on the old Lawrence homestead near Mt. Rock, this county, and was a brother of the late Henry Lawrence, of near this place, and John and David Lawrence of Irishtown. He was the last of a family of eight sons.

Win. L. Klunk, youngest son of the late Jacob and Mary Klunk, of Hanover, died at his home in Alton, Ill., July 22, aged about 64 years, of paralysis. Improvements.

The foundation walls for the new frame house of Mr. E. C. Bond on West High street are in course of erection.

Ground was broken Tuesday morning for a fine modern frame dwelling on Pitt street, beyond the railroad, by H. A. Weikert, of Mountpleasant township.

Mr. J. A. Weikert also started to dig the cellar Tuesday morning for a new brick dwelling adjoining Clearview school house, close to town.

Returned From Hospital.

Leroy Bittinger, youngest son of Hon. and Mrs. John R. Bittinger, of near Hendrix Station, who met with a distressing accident while at work in the quarry near his home some weeks ago, in which his lower jaw bone was broken in three places, returned Saturday morning from Philadelphia, where he was under treatment at the Medico-Chi Hospital. The wounds are healing nicely and the young man is now suffering but slight inconvenience from the effects of the operation.

Parents Forgive Girl Who Eloped.

York, Pa., July 25.—Ollie Spangler, of Littlestown, the father of Miss Elsie Spangler, the young woman who, almost on the eve of her wedding, jilted Claude Erb, of York, to become the bride of Robert Stover, is out with a statement concerning the affair. Mr. Spangler says: "I did not compel my daughter to make involuntary preparations for marriage to Claude Erb. The fact is I did not want Elsie to marry, as I thought her too young, but when I saw she was determined to marry Erb my opposition yielded. I had no idea that she intended marrying Robert Stover. I was under the impression that she was preparing her wedding outfit with the intention of becoming Erb's bride. You may imagine my surprise when I was informed that another led her to the altar.

"But she has our forgiveness and can return to our home to claim her belongings when she likes, though we are much mortified over the step she has taken and the notoriety attained."

Some of the Guards made things lively last Friday night at the Central Hotel in Gettysburg. One of the men was placed in the lockup after a scrap. Proprietor Devine was struck on the head with a beer bottle. The trouble arose over the refusal of a Guardsman to pay for his drinks, he emphasizing his refusal with a well-directed bottle at Devine's head. Other disgraceful scenes are reported, attempted thefts, etc., but, as a rule, the Guards are behaving well. Too much "booze" is causing most of the trouble. Provided the money is forthcoming, there is no limit to the amount of liquor one may buy.—News.

Barn and Contents Burned.

The large barn of Christian Deardorff, near Querny Postoffice, Butler township, was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon together with all the crops and a good thrasher owned by John Osborn. The fire originated from a hot box in the thrasher. The barn and crops were insured in the Adams County Mutual.

An attempt was made at York Monday afternoon by an incendiary to burn P. Wiest's Sons' large mercantile building, valued at $150,000, and that of Theodore Gehley, valued at $75,000. Fires were started in the toilet rooms of both buildings simultaneously. Recently the two business blocks of Dr. J. A. Dale were set on fire.

Gettysburg Progress says: Della Myers from parts unknown, was Tuesday given a hearing charged with being a common nuisance. In default of $20 bail Justice Quimby sent her to jail to await trial at the August term of court. This is the second character of this kind to be jailed in the past two weeks, but there are still several nearly as bad, at large.

THE SEA.

Come down with me to the moon-led sea,
Where the long wave ebbs and flows—
Are these the tides that follow
As the lunar impulse wills?

Nay, rather this is the heart of God,
Naked under the sky,
And we hear its pulse with wonder—
The shore, and the clouds and I!

Uncertainly, awful, uncompeled,
Eternity framed in clay,
The urge of exhaustless passions
Rocking beneath the gray!

It is life is the blood of the universe
Through cosmic arteries hurled,
With the throb of its giant pulses
God feeds the veins of the world!
And the lands are wrinkled and gray
With time.

And scored with a thousand scars,
But the sea is the soul of the Infinite,
Swinging beneath the stars.

England Magazine.

Lucky Rain Drops.

As the weather had been fine for quite half an hour people had donned their light clothing and had sallied forth into the park, feeling spruce and merry. They sailed out again, however, with undignified haste when a sudden downpour of rain came from nowhere in particular—for no one had noticed any clouds—transforming most of them into mere masses of drenched misery in less than three minutes.

Lily, her head bent forward against the wind, and with both hands holding her wind-driven skirts, started to run toward Grant monument. Not many yards had she gone when she collided with Clayton, who was scurrying toward the park corner.

"I beg your pardon," said he.

Lily stood still, her back to the wind and her wavy golden hair blowing prettily over her shoulders and framing her flushed face.

"You!" she exclaimed.

Now he was standing still, too. They stared confusedly at each other, neither knowing what to say.

"I thought," he ventured at last, "that I had nearly killed somebody. I sincerely hope— But, there, I'm forgetting the rain and you've no umbrella. Hi, there, you with the tent! I'll give you $5 for it!"

This to a ragged old man who, nevertheless, seemed to be comparatively happy, having a misshapen but inviting umbrella.

"Done!" said the old fellow, jumping eagerly at the bargain. "It ain't much of a beauty for promenading, sir, and mebbe it ain't worth so much, but—"

"It is to me," said Clayton. "Here's the money. Now," turning once more to Lily, "let's find a more sheltered place."

Beneath the ugly umbrella the young couple hurried along toward a huge tree that seemed to offer some protection from wind and rain.

"How strange," remarked Clayton, "that we should suddenly find ourselves journeying along together again once more, just as we used to do, as though we had never quarreled! At this moment I can scarcely realize that all is over—"

"It isn't," snapped the girl emphatically. "I mean, the rain isn't over yet. But it will soon be, and—and you really needn't have bothered about an umbrella."

"Well, you need not stand so far away, if you do hate me."

He took her arm and pulled her, ever so gently, toward him. She noticed, as she leaned nearer, that his heart was pounding violently, but hoped he was not as observant of the fluttering of her own.

"I suppose Wilfred Gray would begrudge me these few moments with you if he knew."

"Let us talk about something impersonal," said she. "The rain, for instance."

"Don't you find that a sufficiently dampening subject already?"

"Well, then—um—er—Oh, yes! Have you seen Miss Gertie Terry lately?"

"I have, very lately. I tell you, I like Gertie Terry tremendously."

"I know you do. It's an old attachment."

She made a proud but unsuccessful attempt to free her arm from his.

"Why shouldn't I like her?" he continued. "I'm to be best man at her wedding next month. She marries my friend Bentley."

Lily unconsciously breathed a sigh of relief.

"Aren't you happy, alone here with me, Lily?" he queried, with sudden and uncontrollable tenderness.

"Goodness! there's a perfect stream running down this slope. My skirt is all draggly!"

"What a thoughtless fool I am!" he exclaimed. "Here, step up on this bench."

He helped her upon the bench, and took his place beside her, and both laughed again like children.

"I wouldn't part with this umbrella now for a million. Why, where on earth is your engagement ring, Lily?"

"What has that to do with the umbrella?"

"Answer me. You must. What has become of your ring?"

"I'm sure I don't know what he did with it, after I sent it back to him." "Then you're not— You're free?" Silence.

"Lily, guess what I'm going to do." "Don't you dare! Remember you said when we parted you would never forgive me for flirting with Wilfred. That's why I grew reckless and engaged myself to him. That's why—"

"Hang Wilfred! I'm about to kiss the tip of the prettiest ear in Chicago!" "If you do I'll never forgive you. Besides, they can see us plainly from the boulevard."

I don't care if the whole world—" A nondescript, woebegone woman, with a sudden hat, its limp black feathers suddenly made her appearance in front of the bench and paused shiveringly as if anxious to remain in the company of two beings so warm and happy looking in the midst of all the bleakness.

"I'm a stranger here. Won't you please tell me the way out of the park?"

"Certainly, madam; go that way," replied Clayton, pointing anywhere.

She had scarcely disappeared when the history making umbrella, in response to the invitation of a passing gust of wind, turned suddenly inside out. Clayton, after a moment's dismay reversed the ludicrous looking object, and held it over them by its apex, the homely bulldog handle standing on guard far above.

Then he repeated his question to Lily—the only question in the world at that moment.

"Won't you forgive the past, Lily? Won't you let bygones be bygones, and wear my ring once more?"

The "inverted bowl" of the umbrella was brought down so far over their heads that it completely hid them from view, and for two foolish young lovers the beating rain was turned into a golden mist!

A policeman's finger tapped Clayton sharply on the arm.

"You can sit on the bench if you like, but you're not allowed to scratch the paint by standing."

The bewildered couple suddenly became conscious that the sun was shining brightly and that half a dozen idlers stood there in the walk, gaping curiously at them.

"Nor you don't need your umbrella now," added the policeman, with an incipient grin. "It's been fine for the last half hour."—Chicago Tribune.

MEN GROWING TALLER.

Our Ancestors of Mediaeval Times
Puny Compared With Athletes of Today.

A walk through the Tower of London will convince any person that the armor-clad knights of mediaeval days were puny men compared with the athlete of today.

The experiment of getting into suits of old armor in country houses has often proved that the "legs" are far too short for the average man of the present generation.

A well known anthropologist at the British museum says that undoubtedly the British race is taller than it was several hundred years ago.

"I think, however, that the mediaeval man was deeper chested and broader in the shoulders," he said.

"The old armor, if a man of good average height could squeeze into it today, would be found loose fitting in the shoulders and at the chest."

"The tallest men in the world come from Galloway and Perthshire and Yorkshire, average is a fine one. Even that of southwest England and South Wales—5 feet 6 inches—is far higher than that of many of the continental nations."

"The tallest men after the men of Galloway, who have an average of nearly six feet, are the Fulahs of the French Soudan, and the Patagonians are believed to hold a very good average."

In London the average is as low as in South Wales, and the little man frequently asks why he should have to pay the same price for a suit of clothes as a country bred giant.

This question was answered by a West End tailor. "What we make by the little man we lose on the big man," he said; "for we pay our men extra when they are working on a giant's suit."

"We have been compelled on one or two occasions, however, to charge more when a man is exceptionally tall or stout. One of our customers, who is over six feet high and 44 inches around the chest and 47 inches round the waist, takes five and a half double width for a lounge suit. We ask another guinea, and he pays it readily."—London Express.

Gunpowder Bags.

A comparatively new thing in warfare is the use of a material to hold the powder loaded into big guns, which will be consumed at the time of the discharge. The canvas bags used for this purpose are not so consumed and necessitate the subsequent removal of what is left of them from the powder chamber of the piece. The new material is, in fact, gunpowder itself. It explodes and adds to the power of the discharge and no trace of it is left. If ignited in the open air it disappears in the same way.

THE EVE OF A SEA BATTLE.

What a Naval Engagement Means on a Modern Ship of War.

THE following article by Lieutenant Charles Gleig, formerly of the British Navy, is printed in the Chicago Chronicle:

A fleet of six gray battle-ships is steaming rapidly in a calm sea. Far ahead of the fleet can be distinguished the hulls and slender masts of several cruisers. These are the scouts, the "eyes" of the fleet, upon which the Admiral relies for news of the enemy's movements. Other cruisers, out of sight of the battle fleet, are scouring the seas upon some prearranged plan. Let us, however, confine our attention to the battle fleet. The six great armor-clad are all of one type, forming a homogeneous squadron. Each is of 15,000 tons displacement, of equal speed and carries similar guns. To the eyes of the landsmen they are like as half a dozen dried peas, and their similarity is accentuated by the gray paint that covers them from truck to water line. They are formed in two divisions, not as yet in order of battle. The two leading ships each flies an Admiral's flag. The divisions are six cables apart (1200 yards), but the space between each unit is but 400 yards, and this interval, you will notice, is maintained with an accuracy won by constant practice. Little smoke issues from the tall, gray funnels. In the smooth sea the heavy ships have no perceptible motion, though you can see they are making progress by the white foam at the bows and by the broad ribbon of foam churned up by the twin screws of each vessel.

Presently a red and white "answering" pennant streams from the mast-head of the flagship. One of the scouts is signalling. She begins to close with the squadron. One perceives that other and more distant cruisers are also steaming back to the fleet. We guess the reason long before our keen-eyed signalman can distinguish the message. The enemy has been sighted some twenty miles to the eastward. Such is the welcome news. At once the flagship runs up a signal: "Prepare for action; form the order of battle." For in these days of fast steaming twenty miles' interval affords but comfortable breathing space unless the enemy decides to run away. If he is bearing down upon us we may be within range of him in a quarter of an hour. Such, it seems, is his design, so our ships must form at once into single line.

Let us note what preparations are being made for the coming battle. The game has been rehearsed often enough—so often, indeed, that we can hardly realize that this is at last the real thing, the grim reality. Take any ship at random. The same preparations are being made in all. Seven hundred men are going about their ordinary business. Suddenly a bugle blares out the familiar call to "general quarters," and ere the harsh notes have died away every man begins to run to his appointed station. Some make toward the great barbettes, where the 12-inch guns are snugly sheltered; some for the armored casemates isolating the 6-inch weapons; others run to the light, quick-firers, mounted upon the superstructure. Others, again, and these mostly noncombatants (if any such can be in a ship of war), hurry below to the shell rooms and magazines.

The great shells for the barbette guns are being placed on the hydraulic lifts. A lever is pressed and up they go. Another moment and they have reached the breech of the gun. A gunner closes the heavy mechanism of the breech with one hand. "Run out!" orders the officer of the turret. Another lever does the business. The enormous weapons glide smoothly outward, their long necks projecting overboard as the barbette is trained. A dozen men and one officer complete the crew of this pair of heavy guns. The officer stands upon a little iron platform, peering above the turret, with a voice tube at his ear. The captain of the turret is peering through the telescopic sights.

Glance into one of the isolated casemates. The thick, armored door is shut now, inclosing the 6-inch gun and its crew in a box of steel. The gun has been cast loose, trained on the beam, and loaded within four minutes of the bugle call. Reserves of shot and shell are being whipped up into the casemate through a round aperture leading to the shell room below. Twenty or thirty rounds soon accumulate, and the gun's crew will stake their lives against the entry of a shell through the casemate. Here, too, is an officer waiting directions through a voice tube. The men have stripped to their flannels and trousers. A tub of lime-juice stands in a corner.

Down in the bowels of the ship the torpedo men are clustered around their submerged tubes. With great care they are adjusting the Whiteheads, and their movements are slower than those of the gunners, since the chance for a shot will not come early in the fight. Yet a lucky shot from the enemy might explode the torpedo in its tube. They accept the risk, these quiet-looking men, and long for close range later on. Then they will show the gunnery branch what a Whitehead can do.

The captain and the gunnery lieutenant are in the conning tower—a cramped little structure bristling with voice tubes. It contains a small steering wheel and is in communication with both batteries, the several groups of guns, and with the engine rooms. Reports are constantly being made through these numerous voice tubes. Thus: "All watertight doors are closed, sir." "Barbettes ready for action." "Steam ready for eighteen knots, sir," and so forth. The chief quartermaster, a bearded veteran, sprucely dressed, grasps the spokes of the steering wheel and keeps an attentive eye upon the captain. Not a man can now be seen upon the upper deck, but in the thinly protected top on the foremost a few hands and a middy are clustered around a three-pounder gun.

All is now ready. The fleet increases speed and the cruisers, closing in, one after another, take station to the rear. So we wait, a period of anxious suspense, since scarcely a dozen men of the 700 can see the approaching enemy. At last the twelve-pounder, which is our best range finder, rings out with sharp report. We know that the hour has come. The captain gives an order through the tubes to each of the barbettes: "Leading ship of the enemy on the port bow, range 4000 yards." "All ready, sir," comes the reply. A moment later the two pairs of heavy guns are simultaneously fired. The ship quivers under the shock of the discharge. The battle has begun. The 700 men think swiftly of home, of mothers, wives, sweethearts, of little children. A shell from the enemy crashes through a lightly armored section of the hull, bursts and knocks two large boats into matchwood. Again the ship quivers and rushes on. Home is now forgotten. The men turn their minds to the bloody work in hand.

To judge Moros by inflexible Occidental standards of motives and morals is to lose at once the key to the situation. The very structure of their language differentiates them from ourselves. Verbs are in the passive voice. The man who was slashed and killed provoked the trouble. The under dog in the fight is always the aggressor. The thief is not blamed for "finding" things lying about at loose ends; the man who lost the property is the real criminal—besides, he is a fool. If he were a sensible man he would have exercised vigilance against the approach of the thief. Moros reverse everything. Like all Orientals, they venerate the past and their folklore, myths and legends abound in tales not unlike those of the Arabian Nights entertainment.

The Scents of Dukani.

A novel game has been introduced called "the scents of dukani." The scents, thirty in number, are inclosed each in a little bag and suspended from a rope. A lady chooses a partner, and together they go and "nose" the bags, one after the other, and write down what they suppose to be its scent. The pair who succeed in making the most correct list are the winners. That there is a good variety of odors is clearly seen from the list appended: Cloves, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg, verbena, eucalyptus, onion, brown soap, Bombay duck, aloes, eau de cologne, musk, coffee, tea, lavender, camphor, creosote, lemon, peppermint, whiskey, brandy, ammonia, benzine, turpentine, mustard, licorice, aniseed, cheese, carrot and curry powder.—Washington Star.

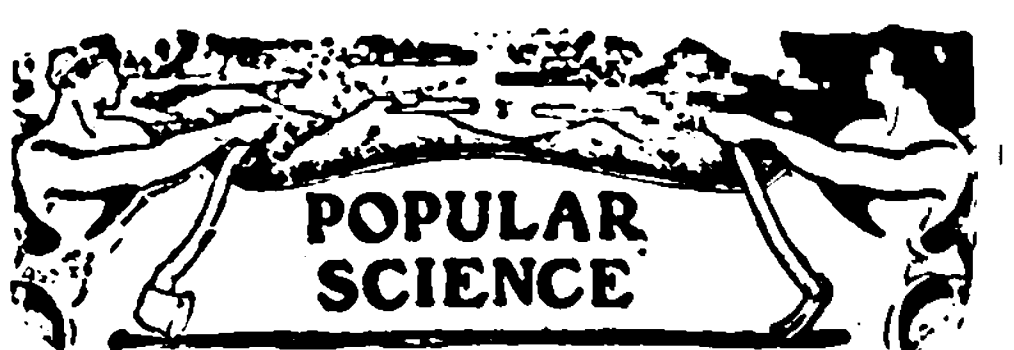

Turkish Booksellers.

A writer who spent much of his early life in Turkey observed that Turkish books and booksellers were among the curious features of the country. "The Turkish bookseller," he said, "has a soul above trade. He rarely or never attempts to push his wares, and treasures some of his more valuable books so greatly that he can hardly be induced to sell them, although they form part of his stock in trade. Many of the books displayed by the bookseller are in manuscript, which the old-fashioned Turks esteem more highly than print." The Koran he may not sell. He gives it away—in return for a present of its value in money.

Paper False Teeth.

False teeth made of paper are in use in Germany, and are reputed to be highly satisfactory. These paper teeth have several advantages over the ordinary ones of porcelain or mineral composition. They are very cheap, do not break or chip, are not sensitive to heat or cold, nor has the moisture of the mouth any injurious effect upon them.

In England the income tax is levied on gross incomes estimated at $4,330,000,000. In 1861 that tax amounted to $1,500,000; it now amounts to $12,500,000.

M. Roualt has found that trees may be transplanted in full foliage in May, or June with little or no injury if the moving is done at night. This has been demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of prominent French horticulturists.

The report of the English turbine commission, to determine the advantages of turbine over reciprocating engines for the 70,000-horse-power new Cunarders, shows that the economy of turbines on the English Channel is only two to four per cent., and that the saving of weight will be only 300 tons.

The Boston Natural History Society is preparing complete lists of the fauna of New England, of which the first, part, containing the reptiles, has been issued in Occasional Papers. These lists are to prepare the way for a complete illustrated monograph of the fauna which the society proposes to furnish.

For some time astronomers have tried to adapt the stereoscope to astronomy, says Cosmos, Paris, and very satisfactory relief photographs of the moon have been obtained by taking views at sufficiently long intervals and utilizing the slight swinging of the moon to and fro in space. The moon appears in exaggerated relief.

An Austrian statistician finds that the average lease of life of a medical practitioner is sixty years. Deaths due to tubercular consumption only amount among them to seven per cent., thus showing how careful they are in taking precautions against infection. On the other hand, fully forty per cent. of doctors die of heart disease and nervous collapse.

A correspondent to an English science journal announces that an archaeological undertaking of an important character is about to be set on foot, namely, the complete excavation of Herculaneum. It is proposed that this vast work should be carried out by the co-operation of Italy with all civilized countries, and that there should be a central managing committee in Rome, with national committees elsewhere.

A committee has been appointed by the Council of the Library Association of Great Britain to consider the question of the "deterioration of modern binding leathers" and to suggest a remedy. A circular is being issued to the chief libraries in the United Kingdom with the view of ascertaining, among other matters, what effective support is likely to be forthcoming from librarians in favor of leathers of the standard specified by the Society of Arts' Committee.

One of the curious devices of Nature for scattering seeds is seen in the balloon plant of California. The fruit is yellow, and is a little larger than an egg. It has the appearance of an empty bag, not of a solid, but it contains a watery substance which evaporates or dries up when the fruit matures, a sort of gas taking its place. This gas is lighter than air, and the fruit flips back and forth in the wind until it finally breaks loose from its slender stem, rises into the air to a height of from seventy-five to a hundred feet, and sails away to fall in some distant spot, and thus extend the growth of its kind.

In his work as Director of the Indian Meteorological Department, Sir John Elliot has found that while one hemisphere of the earth, which includes Europe, Southern Asia, Africa, India and Australia, is experiencing high atmospheric pressure on the average, the other hemisphere, which includes North and South America and Siberia, is experiencing a deficiency of pressure, and vice versa. This seesaw of pressure has an average period of about four years or a little less. This and other facts that must influence long-period forecasting lead Sir John to declare that the next development of weather study will almost certainly be in the direction of international or world meteorology and its relation to sun-spots and terrestrial magnetism.

A Case of Pure Luck.

Lord Villiers, who is said to have brought back with him from Monte Carlo the useful sum of £40,000, is the eldest son of the Earl of Jersey, says the London Tatler. Unlike Lord Rosslyn, he had no system, but simply backed his luck. After he had won £32,800 a friend who was with him implored him to be content with his winnings and leave Monte Carlo before the luck turned, but Lord Villiers was apparently a better judge than his friend; at any rate, he remained on for another three days, during which time he added £8000 to his winnings. Since his return to England he has received on an average more than 100 letters a day imploring him to disclose the secret of the system which turned out so well.

Miss Hapgood tells how she was cured of Fallopian and Ovarian Inflammation—and escaped an awful operation by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for four years with what the doctors called Salpingitis (inflammation of the fallopian tubes) and ovaritis, which are most distressing and painful ailments, affecting all the surrounding parts, undermining the constitution, and sapping the life forces. If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me as I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine, which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—Miss IRENE HAPGOOD, 1022 Sandwich St., Windsor, Ont.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words.

"Before I wrote to you telling how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady and spent lots of money in medicine besides, but it all failed to do me any good. My menses did not appear in that time, and I suffered much pain. I would daily have fainting spells, headache, backache and bearing down pain, and was so weak that it was hard for me to do my work.

"I used your medicine and treatment as directed, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, menses appeared, my womb troubles left me, and I have been regular ever since. I used fourteen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier together, and am now restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you, I would have been in my grave.

"I will always recommend your wonderful remedies, and hope that these few lines may lead others who suffer as I did to try your remedies."—Mrs. T. C. WILLADSEN, R. R. No. 1, Manning, Iowa.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

Resents High Taxes. Because he believes that some of his property in Omaha, Neb., has been unjustly taxed George A. Joslyn, the millionaire President of the Western Newspaper Union, has boarded up the windows of the mansion he recently built there at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, turned his cows into the grounds which landscape artists from New York were sought to beautify and gone with his family to Saratoga, N. Y., to reside permanently.

A London medical journal says that slaves of alcohol and narcotics run great risks of being buried alive, especially in hot countries, where interment soon follows death.

Strict Building Law. New York now has the most stringent theater building law of any city in the world, Mayor McClellan having signed the McCall ordinance. The law requires that every theater built in the future must have a 14-foot court on both sides and in the rear and that no seat shall have more than six seats between it and an aisle on either side.

A FABLE.

BY M'LANDERBURY WILSON.

There was a very learned man
Who had a foolish wish:
He set a mouse-trap on a bank
In hopes of catching fish.

He then went home and all day long
He sat around the house;
With rod and reel and wriggling worm,
He tried to catch a mouse.

The moral of his enterprise:
The whole of life will match;
You always should adapt your bait
To what you want to catch.

An "Old Man's" Monologue. There was a benefit performance in New York for a hospital not long ago, says the Saturday Evening Post, and Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, volunteered. His part was to make a short speech, telling how the funds realized were to be applied.

Two singing and dancing girls came from their dressing room. They stopped to await their call. One of them thought she would see what was going on, and peeked out on the stage.

"Who's on now?" her companion asked.
"Oh," said the investigator, "it's an old man doing a monologue, and, say, he's something fierce. He's been on ten minutes already, and hasn't had a laugh."

A Valuable Spring. The value of a spring of water on a farm may be gathered from the following item: John E. Madden, of Lexington, Ky., recently purchased the farm of James C. McCann, paying $75,000 for eighty acres. Mr. Madden declares that he did not want the land, but that he purchased it because it contained a never failing spring of water adjacent to his own farm.

A Well Known Canadian Lady Sends Letter of Endorsement to Pe-ru-na.

Miss Mary Burns, 28 Spring Garden Road, Halifax, N. S., writes: "Having used Peru-na for indigestion and stomach trouble and to build up a broken down system with the very best results, I am pleased to state my experience with this excellent medicine. I had been troubled with stomach trouble and poor digestion for some years, and although I tried many remedies and dieting, nothing seemed to restore my health until I used Peru-na. In three months I had entirely recovered my health and strength."—Mary Burns.

Doctors' Ailments.

Some statistics just published in Austria throw an interesting light on the ailments from which doctors suffer. One fact is instructive. The medical profession contributes only 7 per cent to the mortality from tuberculosis, which speaks volumes for the efficacy of intelligent precaution. On the other hand, for some reason not very apparent, 40 per cent of doctors die from diseases of the heart or of the nervous system, while also 40 per cent of Austrian victims of the morphia habit are medical men. The average age of Austrian doctors is 60.

A REASON FOR SICKNESS.

Healthy kidneys take from the blood every twenty-four hours 500 grains of impure, poisonous matter—more than enough to cause death.

Weakened kidneys leaves this waste in the blood, and you're soon sick. To get well, cure the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, the great kidney specific.

Mrs. J. H. Bowles, of 118 Core street, Durham, N. C., says: "I was sick and bed-fast for over nine months, and the doctor who attended me said unless I submitted to an operation for gravel I would never be well. I would not consent to that and so continued to suffer. My back was so weak I could not stand or walk, and it ached constantly. The first day after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I felt relief, and in a short time I was up and around the same as ever, free from backache."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Bowles will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers, price fifty cents per box.

Suggestions by Dr. Hartman—How to Combat the Nervous Depression Incident to Warm Weather.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anaemic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoir for nerve vitality. These centers become bloodless for the want of proper nutrition.

This condition is especially noticeable during the warm season. Every summer an army of invalids are produced as a direct result of weak nervous systems.

This could easily be overcome by the use of Peru-na. Peru-na strikes at the root of the trouble by correcting the digestion. Perfect digestion furnishes increased nutrition for the nerve centers. Perfectly digested food gives these reservoirs of life a vitality which creates strong, steady nerves, and in this manner fortifies and nourishes life.

Miss Blanche Grey, a prominent young society woman of Memphis, Tenn., in a recent letter from 174 Alabama street, writes: "To a society woman whose nervous force is often taxed to the utmost from lack of rest and irregular meals, I know of nothing which is of so much benefit as Peru-na. I took it a few months ago when I felt my strength giving way, and it soon made itself manifest in giving me new strength and health."—Miss Blanche Grey.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peru-na has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Peru-na is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peru-na does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peru-na has been used on and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peru-na contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

At this season of the year we are peculiarly liable to inflammations of the stomach and bowels. It is the part of wisdom to learn how to combat them short and in the easiest and quickest manner. Peru-na does this by its peculiar power over all forms of catarrhal troubles.

Base Ball.

An interesting game of ball was played here Saturday afternoon between the New Oxford A. A. team and the Hanover Shoe club, which resulted in a victory for the latter by the score of 3 to 2. In the first inning Hanover scored two of their runs through costly errors on the part of the home team. In the last inning the umpire made several rank decisions. With three men on bases and two men out, B. Lawrence was at bat with one strike and three balls, the next ball thrown struck the bat and batter, he was allowed to take his base and the man on third was sent home, tying the score. Here the Hanover players made a kick, that as the ball struck the bat it was to be counted a strike and they started to leave the field. Umpire Hoffheins thereupon reproached the men on bases and the batter to that. Here the umpire, perhaps in order to hurry the end of the game, got in his bad work. The last and only ball to be thrown to decide this batter was called a strike although the man was standing erect, the ball passed higher than the crown of his cap. Thus the game ended. Mr. George Lawrence the clever shortstop and one of the heaviest hitters on the team, was unable to play on account of suffering from a carbunkle on his ankle.

Put Off Train For Lack Of Three Cents.

John Miller, the cripple who conducts the fruit stand at the W. M. depot, Gettysburg, one evening last week decided to visit some relatives in Littlestown but was forcibly ejected from the train between Hanover and Littlestown, because he could not pay his full fare. Mr. Miller did not know how much the fare from Hanover to Littlestown was and consequently when the conductor asked him to pay, he found that he was three cents short. The conductor at once stopped the train and although it was late in the evening put Miller, who is in feeble health, off at a lonely way station. Mr. Miller says that several passengers when they saw the predicament he was in, offered to pay the conductor the difference, if he would allow Miller to stay on the train as far as Littlestown but the conductor refused these offers of assistance and insisted on his leaving the train. After the train started leaving Miller several miles from his destination, he did not know exactly what to do as he was unable to walk any distance. After his eyes became accustomed to the darkness he saw a farm house and went there and asked to be allowed to spend the remainder of the night. The farmer took him in, and the next morning sent him to his destination. Mr. Miller is very indignant over the treatment he received and intends to sue for damages, if the conductor does not at least apologize for his, to say the least unnecessary severity.

Two Workmen Got Fortunes.

York, July 20.—Charles Geiger, a humble laborer of this city, who went to Stuttgart, Germany, about six weeks ago to lay claim to his share of an estate left by his father, whose death occurred twelve years ago, has written to his wife here informing her that he expects to return from the fatherland a rich man. Instead of $20,000, which he expected as his inheritance, Geiger writes that he will receive $50,000, as the death of his step-mother, who had interested him in coming to Germany to claim his rights, has just occurred and he will receive that part of the estate which she held during life. One of the happiest Irishmen in Pennsylvania to-day is James Hutton, 52 years old, resident of York Springs. He received a letter from lawyers in Belfast, Ireland, informing him that by the death of his uncle, James Hutton, a wealthy Irish farmer, he has inherited $20,000. This will relieve the fortunate Irishman of the hard toil he has known for the seventeen years he has been living in this country and he will return to Ireland to live a life of ease.

Sent to Jail for 15 Days.

The York Press contains this story. A young country girl with the bloom of the roses in her cheeks and the gold of the sunlight in her great mass of wavy hair listened to the story of shame told in the grating language of the police court into the morbid ears of half a hundred men who crowded the room and the doorway at city hall in York Saturday morning. It was her own story and yet there was that about her presence to give one reason for belief that it was not callousness of a soul steeped in crime, but her very innocence that gave her the jaunty air and the smile that went with her even into the patrol and to the jail. With three men she awaited the mayor in the dock at police court. Attired in tawdry finery and a nodding picture hat, her fresh young face looked woefully out of place. She was enveloped in an atmosphere of cheap perfume that deadened the reek of liquor from the sots about her. Shortly after 4 o'clock Saturday morning Officer Ruby was notified that four men and a woman were together along the Western Maryland railroad, near George St. He hurried to the spot and one man who was still with the woman, seeing him, ran away, leaving his hat behind. The girl was drunk, and calling the patrol, the officer locked her up. Her eyes were slightly swollen from crying, but she told her story in a careless tone to the mayor. She was a country girl and her father has a farm between Hanover and Abbottstown. Her name is Sally Gracey. She had been to the city several times before and last Sunday decided to come here to stay. She boarded with Ann Lytle, street or number she could not give, and Friday night one of the "girls" induced her to go out with her. She never did it before, she said, and she would promise to be good and go home if the mayor released her. Her night in the lock up had been an awful experience. His honor refused to release the girl and sentenced her to 15 days' imprisonment. "Must I really stay in that place over Sunday?" She asked it in awed tone and it was her first and only real evidence of concern. Her parents will at once be communicated with by friends and her release secured, if possible. It is evident that a taste of "life" of the town had been a fatal fascination for the simple country lass and she had run away from home. She hesitated at the step to the patrol, but it was useless. She had already found the drugs in the bottom of her cup of pleasure.

Teacher 56 Years.

Fifty-six years of service in the public schools of York and Adams counties is the record of John M. Wolf, of Hanover. He is doubtless the oldest teacher in point of service in the State. For twenty-two years of that time he has also been a justice of the peace. Although 71 years old he continues in the harness, having just been re-elected teacher of Park school, near Hanover. When but 15 years of age he took charge of the school he was attending as a pupil, and in the fifty-six years since then has been absent from his post of duty only three and a half days. Possessed of marked ability, an excellent disciplinarian and an untiring worker, "Squire Wolf" is considered one of the most successful school teachers in southern Pennsylvania. He has been principal of the public schools of Abbottstown, Littlestown, New Oxford and Hanover. Four of his children have been school teachers, one daughter having taught thirty years.
